

WHITE GOODS, LACES AND EMBROIDERY WEEK

AT

Eugene Edge's

ALL THIS WEEK

1910 is to be a Lace and Embroidery Year if the fashion authorities are to be believed. The new Tunic or Louis styles will be welcomed because of the tendency to draperies and a little more fussiness than has prevailed for some time. The enborn love of fluffy laces and dainty embroideries can be gratified this year if one would be in style. Our spring and summer stock of laces and embroideries has arrived. The new creations are simply beautiful. We want you to see them. We propose the lace and embroidery week for the purpose of showing you these new things. To insure a successful week we offer our new stock at unheard of prices at this season of the year. We want the presence of all lovers of Laces, Embroideries and White Goods. Remember all of this merchandise is new—not a second or remnant in the lot.

Laces

Here you will find a complete lace store—100 different styles and patterns await your inspection. The dainty rals of French and German makes in all the new designs of Linen Torchons. This showing of lace will make you want to buy a year's supply. 500 Doz. Val Lace, worth 60c per dozen, will be sold, per dozen,	25 Cts.

TRIUMPHS OF THE INTELLECT.

The romantic minds of the Orient could imagine no more impossible thing than a wonderful genl who could be instantly summoned by rubbing a bronze lamp and who offered to perform any service, no matter how monumental and difficult, at the bidding of his master. How many folk still read this interesting fairy tale, culled from the folk lore of ancient Arabia, then laying the book down with a soft smile at such an utter impossibility go and summons the genl we now call electricity to instantly light the other rooms in the house, to pop the corn, to heat the clafing dish or to carry them quickly down town?

This is but another of those ancient tales which time has brought into reality. It is another dream come true. Men who laughed at Darius Green and his flying machine have lived to see men fly; those who smiled at Verne and Bellamy have lived to see the submarine boat, wireless telegraphy, moving pictures and the talking machine and other things far more wonderful.

There is a genl in every electric lamp socket which awaits, but the touch of a finger to come out and do the house work, cook the foods or light and heat the apartments. All it asks is to be set to work, and like its Arabian cousin, it never shirks, never grows tired and there is no task too small or too large for it to do. It never complains nor does it ask for vacations.

This is an age of fireless, dustless, laborless, wasteless and fatiguelless housekeeping. The electric house has been proven a success and they are no longer novelties to incite the admiration of all. Electric cooking has become common and the inventive genius has perfected electric devices to do almost all the work about the home under the most approved methods. The old coal stove no longer dirties up the kitchen and tires one out lugging coal and ashes—the wooden range run by electricity has taken its place. The oil lamps are no longer cleaned and filled—thanks to the new metal filament electric lamps. The old broom has been laid aside and replaced by the vacuum cleaner and the motor does the kitchen work and runs the sewing machine.

There are a number of young men and women in the electric city of Schenectady doing light housekeeping and they find the small electric stove most convenient as it is free from all odor and soot and does not require any attention. The heat is there when you want it and goes when you bid it begone. Such stoves include an electric oven, a griddle, a broiler, three or four electric cookers and a coffee percolator. For working people, whose time is precious, electricity is an ideal source of heat for cooking purposes. As nearly all of these cooking devices can be used on the ordinary lamp socket many people dispense with the kitchen outfit altogether and cook such meals as breakfast and luncheon on the dining room table and take dinner out in the evening. This is a most convenient and economical way.

One of the most important of all the electric devices which can be operated from the ordinary lamp socket is the electric flatiron. Not only is the larger sized iron used almost universally in the household, but many women who travel extensively carry a smaller electric iron with them on their trips, finding it most useful to press laces, shirt waists or even a light skirt. Such a small iron, and their traveling companions, the electric curling iron and the small electric water heater, only cost a small fraction of a cent to operate and are most handy and convenient.

Great have been the triumphs of the human intellect during the past twenty-five years.—Waco Times-Herald.

PROVERBS AND PHRASES.

That power which erring men call chance.—Milton.

Rich in saving common sense.—Tennyson.

Lofty designs must close in like effects.—Browning.

Before man made us citizens, great Nature made us men.—Lowell.

Many of the men of Bryan from a religious standpoint, have heretofore been inclined to say:

"Take my wife and let her be consecrated, Lord, to thee."

They are now beginning to say, and to sing:

"Take my life and let it be consecrated, Lord, to thee."

March 10th has been designated as Clean-Up Day for the towns and cities of Texas. Dr. Brumby, state health officer, urges that all sanitary measures be carefully looked after. The Eagle hopes the people of Bryan will join in the great movement.

He Was a Good Mixer.

There used to be a popular minister in Indianapolis who was well known in Louisville. He was pastor of one of the leading churches of the city. He was built on the plan of the late Henry George, whose motto was, "I am for men." This Indianapolis preacher was what is called a "good mixer." One day he stopped in a blacksmith shop to chat with the workmen. During the visit a hard faced man of prosperous appearance came into the shop. He and the minister began chatting, but neither knew the other's line of business. They became good friends in a few minutes. Finally the hard faced man produced his card, which announced that he was in the saloon business on West street.

"Come down to my place any time," he said, "and I'll show you a good time."

"All right," replied the minister, "and, by the way, I'm running a pretty good place myself. Come and see me, and I'll show you a good time."

"I'll sure do that," said the other. "But, by the way, where is your joint?"

"My joint," was the reply, "is the First Presbyterian church. Just inquire for Myron W. Weed, the pastor, and I'll be at your service."—Louisville Times.

The Military Salute.

All salutes, from taking off the hat to presenting arms, originally implied respect or submission. Of military salutes, raising the right hand to the head is generally believed to have originated from the days of the tournament, when the knights filed past the throne of the queen of beauty and by way of compliment raised their hands to their brows to imply that her beauty was too dazzling for unshaded eyes to gaze upon.

The officer's salute with the sword has a double meaning. The first position, with the hilt opposite the lips, is a repetition of the crusader's action in kissing the cross hilt of his sword in token of faith and fealty, while lowering the point afterward implies either submission or friendship, meaning in either case that it is no longer necessary to stand on guard. Raising the hand to the forehead has also been explained as a sign that the weapon hand is empty and in an inoffensive position, but this reason does not seem so convincing as the others.
